

HAWKINS RUSSELL JONES LOOKS TO THE FUTURE

Leading law firm, Hawkins Russell Jones, which has offices in Hitchin and Welwyn Garden City, has today announced a number of changes which reflect its modern, forward looking approach and better position the business to meet future opportunities and challenges.

The business is changing its name to HRJ Law, appointing three new associates and launching a distinctive new corporate identity. The firm is also re-launching its website to include an extensive resource section with regularly updated fact sheets on all areas of law. There will also be a facility to sign up for email alerts.

Commenting on the changes David Howard, Chairman of HRJ Law, said: “It is a difficult market out there and even a firm as established as ours can’t afford to rest on its laurels. We hope these changes will show people that we are an accessible and modern business that is underpinned by many years of experience and expertise.”

The new associates are Parmjit Johal and Stephen Patch, who both trained with the firm and specialise in the preparation of wills and estate administration and Mel Lawrence who specialises in residential conveyancing. David Heymans and Margaret Morton are retiring after 37 years and 35 years with the firm respectively.
